Investment Case

Valuation Summary 📊 To make sure the investment stays competitive, we did a deep check of the purchase price by reviewing recent transactions and current market values on the secondary sports card market, considering the last serial number multiplier. Our review confirmed that the price offered, including all fees, is still very competitive. To estimate the potential ROI, we used historical data from the CardLadder Tom Brady Card Index. For the conservative scenario, we assumed the card's value would grow at the Swiss inflation rate, reflecting a defensive approach. In the balanced scenario, we calculated 100% of the average annual growth rate of the CardLadder Tom Brady Card Index over the past six years. In the ambitious scenario, we applied 100% of the average annual growth rate over the last 10 years for a more optimistic outlook.

Exit Options at Maturity 📅 We'll manage the exit strategy for our investors to make sure they get the best possible result depending on market conditions. Based on the card's value and the current market, we'll either sell it privately to a collector or take it to auction. We'll choose the option that maximizes returns.

Why Invest in This Category? 🏆 Sports cards are one of the top-growing alternative assets over the last 5 to 15 years. They combine strong fundamentals like premium licenses, proven brands, the universal love for sports, and legendary talents into innovative collectibles.

Why Invest in This Asset? 🏈 This Tom Brady 2004 Fleer E-X Essential Credentials Now 19/19 is one of the most iconic and emotional pieces in sports card history. Essential Credentials (EC) is one of the hobby's most respected parallel sets, and 2004 marked its final year under Fleer's original leadership. Brady had just wrapped up his early dynasty with three Super Bowl wins in four years. Unlike many collectible legends, Brady only has two EC designs — one from 2000 and one from 2004 — with just 91 cards in total. That makes his EC cards incredibly rare, and the 19/19 serial even more meaningful: 19 years of Brady's full starting career with the New England Patriots. This card is not only Brady's last EC but also the only one showing him in full Patriots uniform. Adding even more appeal, Brady recently became a big figure in the hobby world by buying into a major hobby store chain — boosting his relevance and visibility. Auction comps show that similarly rare EC cards (especially key serials) command strong premiums. Brady's lasting impact, peerless resume, and bigger hobby presence create a perfect setup for appreciation. Scarcity, timing (final EC season + Super Bowl win), and the significance of the 19/19 serial make this card truly irreplaceable. Owning this card means investing in a real symbol of an iconic player and one of the hobby's most beloved sets.

Context in Time ⏳ The collectibles market is moving fast toward ultra-rare, culturally important assets. As Brady's legacy grows after retirement, demand for true "grails" has exploded. With the Essential Credentials line ending in 2004 and Brady's career setting seemingly untouchable records, this card sits right at the intersection of rarity, timing, and historical importance. Investors are focusing more and more on last-year, last-serial assets — and this one is a true crown jewel.

Conclusion 🎯 The Tom Brady 2004 Fleer E-X Essential Credentials Now 19/19 card brings together unmatched rarity, historic importance, and emotional value. With Brady's legacy locked in and growing demand for iconic collectibles, this card offers a unique shot at long-term growth. It's a true symbol of sports and hobby excellence.
